When looking for gold buyers in my area, it is important to consider more than just location. You should also look for a reputable business and understand how the value of your gold will be assessed.

Before visiting a gold buyer, it can be useful to check your jewellery for hallmarks or fineness marks. These may provide information about the purity of your gold. You should also consider whether your jewellery contains diamonds or other gemstones, as these may have value beyond the gold content.

The value of gold can depend on its purity, weight and the current market price. Broken or damaged gold jewellery may also still have value.
