Can I Sell My Old or Unwanted Gold Jewellery?

Many people have old jewellery that they no longer wear or unwanted gold items that have been stored away for years.

Selling old gold jewellery can be an option if you no longer want or use the items. Old jewellery may include rings, chains, bracelets, earrings and other pieces.

The age or condition of an item does not necessarily mean that it has no value. The gold purity and weight may still be important factors. Broken or damaged jewellery may also contain valuable gold.

However, some older jewellery may have additional value because of its design, age, rarity or craftsmanship. For this reason, it is worth considering whether an item may be worth more than its gold content alone.

Before you sell unwanted gold, check for hallmarks and keep any original documentation where possible. Understanding the type and characteristics of your jewellery can help you make a more informed decision.
