Scrap gold generally refers to unwanted, broken or damaged gold items that are no longer being used or worn.

If you are searching for sell scrap gold near me or considering sell my scrap gold, the value of the items may depend mainly on their gold purity and weight.

Examples of scrap gold can include broken chains, damaged rings, single earrings and other unwanted jewellery. Even when an item is no longer suitable to wear, it may still contain valuable gold.

However, not every unwanted gold item should automatically be treated as scrap. Jewellery containing diamonds or coloured gemstones may have value beyond its gold content. Antique or collectible items may also have additional value.

Before selling scrap gold, check for hallmarks or fineness marks and consider whether your items have any features that could affect their value.
